

Self-insured and captive services

The structure behind retained risk.

Structured claims handling for retained risk.

Self-insured and captive models give organisations more control over their risk. At the same time, they increase the complexity of claims handling. Multiple stakeholders, regions and reporting requirements make it harder to maintain oversight, consistency and speed.

These models operate within strict financial and regulatory frameworks. Claims handling must be accurate, transparent and aligned with internal governance. Without a structured approach, data becomes fragmented, insights are limited and cost control turns reactive instead of strategic.

Your trusted partner in self-insured and captive services

Van Ameyde manages claims as an extension of your organisation. We combine local handling with central reporting, ensuring consistency across regions while providing full visibility into performance, trends and costs.

For corporate clients, the result is clear. Claims are handled efficiently, reporting is transparent and governance is strengthened. You gain the insight needed to steer risk proactively and make informed decisions.

With deep expertise and structured processes, Van Ameyde turns claims data into actionable insight. Because when you retain the risk, control and clarity are essential.
